A Poem that came to Dorothy for the start of the Year written by Peter Buxton.

*Once more, with common sense, I come
Because the world seems very glum,
With endless talk concerning some Pandemic Pandemonium.*

*In March I shall go mad again,
But until then I'm nearly sane
And quite convinced in my Hare-brain
That faith and hope and love remain.*

*Let's not regret what we can't do,
But trust in what is good and true.
Our days are short enough and few,
But little joys will get us through.*

*Remember dark times past and gone,
Behind the clouds the sun still shines,
And hope will always lead us on;
It's nearly twenty twenty one*
